I. INTRODUCTION

The Afghanistan Nationwide Quarterly Research (ANQAR) survey was designed to gain a broader understanding of the attitudes, behaviors, and issues that are important to the people of Afghanistan. This report reviews the methodology of the Wave 40 survey conducted in the spring of 2018.

Fieldwork for Wave 40 was conducted by ACSOR for RS/NATO in Afghanistan from May 15-29, 2018. The sample includes a national probability sample of 11,104 Afghans selected at random in all 34 of the country's provinces; and a sample conducted via intercept interviews of 2,318. Respondents were 18 years and older, 64% were male and 36% were female. The survey includes both urban (25%) and rural (75%) households. Unless otherwise noted, all figures in this report represent unweighted results.

Executive Summary

The sampling methodology, questionnaire design, field team, and overall field experience are summarized in this report.

- Fieldwork was conducted from May 15 - 29, 2018. The field team consisted of 1061 trained interviews and supervisors under the management of D3 Systems and ACSOR.
- ANQAR Wave 40 includes a total sample of 13,422 men and women 18 years of age and older in all 34 provinces of Afghanistan. 11,104 interviews were conducted via random walk with male and female respondents and 2,318 interviews were conducted via intercept interviews with males in areas where security or weather restricted random selection interviewing. A full list of the locations for the intercept interviews can be found in Appendix A.
- The sample was stratified by province and urban/rural status using population data released by the Central Statistics Office (2017 - 2018 estimates) of Afghanistan. Additional booster sampling points were distributed to smaller provinces to ensure that the minimum sample size per province was at least 110 interviews. Booster sampling points were distributed in Panjshayr, Nuristan and Nimroz.

- Replacement draws within the same district originally selected were provided to the field team prior to the launch of fieldwork. In the case when the replacements were exhausted, settlement/nahia level replacements were done in field by supervisors where neighboring accessible settlements were chosen as replacements whenever possible. A full list of the Wave 40 replacements can be found in Appendix B.
- The sample was 64% male and 36% female. The survey was designed to include 50% male and 50% female respondents, but due to violence, transportation conditions, and local norms female interviewers could not travel to some selected districts. Sampling points that were planned for interviews with women and could not be covered by female interviewers were replaced with male interviews in the same village.
- The questionnaire consisted of 31 management questions, 18 demographics questions, and 109 substantive questions. Topics included quality of life, security, perceptions of the government, reconciliation, and migration.
- The mean interview length was 33 minutes with a range of 20 to 62 minutes.
- Various quality control procedures were employed throughout the project. During field, interviewers were observed by supervisors. Field supervisors also conducted back-checks of interviews. During the data processing phase, a proprietary program, Hunter, was used to search for patterns or anomalies in the data that may indicate an interview was not properly conducted by an interviewer. For the Wave 40 survey, a total of 347 cases were removed from the dataset; 288 cases were removed for being over 95% similar in substantive responses, 56 cases were removed due to similarities in answers, and 3 cases was removed for having over 40% don't know or refusal responses.
- The data were also screened for keypunching errors. ACSOR randomly selected 10% of the survey's questionnaires for double entry. The double punched questionnaires were compared to the originally punched questionnaires. Discrepancies between the two were rectified and the final data files were based strictly on a review of the original questionnaires. The overall error rate for the Wave 40 survey was .09%. The error rate was very low overall, and we have confidence in the fidelity of the keypunched data.
- The Wave 40 survey has a margin of sampling error of  $\pm 0.85$  percentage points at the 95 percent confidence level. The overall design effect is 1.95. The complex margin of error is  $\pm 1.18\%$ .
- For the overall sample, the response rate is 82.57%, the cooperation rate is 94.59%, the refusal rate is 3.03%, and the contact rate is 87.30%.

II. SAMPLE DESIGN

The sample was drawn using a stratified multi-stage cluster design. D3 used the 2017-2018<sup>1</sup> updated figures provided by the Central Statistics Office (CSO) of the Afghan government. D3 chooses to use this because, similar to the 2010- 2011 update, much of the 2017-2018 update is based on data drawn from the Ministry of Rural Reconstruction and Development relying on results from the National Reconstruction Vulnerability Assessment (NRVA) based on a detailed cataloging of households to help inform the updates in a systematic, replicable way. While the proportions by provinces have changed in mostly a uniform, formulaic manner, the additional use of NRVA data adds to the detail of the estimates.

Sampling Methodology

The target population for this survey was a nation-wide poll of Afghans age 18+.

1. Step 1: Primary sampling units (PSU) were allocated across all of Afghanistan's 34 provinces using proportional stratification. Urban/rural status and province serve as the strata. In field, villages were considered rural while towns, cities and metros were considered urban. Settlements or neighborhoods within randomly selected districts were chosen by simple random sampling.
  - a. Booster interviews (n=88) were added to small provinces to ensure that the minimum sample size per province was at least 110 interviews. Booster interviews were added in Panjshayr (n= 32), Nuristan (n=32) and Nimroz (n=24).
2. Step 2: Districts were selected via probability proportional to size (PPS) systematic sampling. Districts serve as the primary sampling unit (PSU).

<sup>1</sup> There is no official census of Afghanistan. The Central Statistics Office (CSO) of the Afghan government has attempted to provide updates since 2003, but their base is influenced by figures from the 1979 census. The CSO has received support from the UN, the Ministry of Rural Reconstruction and Development, and the World Food Programme to issue updates. D3 completed its review of 2017-2018 updates from the CSO and feels they are acceptable as replacements for the 2006 estimates.

In situations where the selected district was inaccessible due to security, transportation, weather, or other reasons, another district within the province was randomly selected:

- a. In situations where the selected district was inaccessible due to security, transportation or weather, intercept interviews were conducted with residents of those districts who were traveling in neighboring districts. Intercept interviews were used in 293 sampling points. These were conducted with male respondents only<sup>2</sup>. A list of the intercept interviews can be found in Appendix A.

Of the 424<sup>3</sup> potential primary sampling units in the country, 20% were inaccessible to male interviewers, 30% were inaccessible for female interviewers. Overall, 134 completely inaccessible districts were sampled. These were made accessible to male interviewers by intercept interviews.

Including design effects, results have a complex margin of sampling error of +/- 1.18 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence level for the full sample.

3. Step 3: Selected PSU that were completely accessible were divided into two sampling points of 8: one female and one male. This was done to allow for gender matched interviewing due to cultural constraints and to also obtain a greater geographical coverage within district, and therefore overall.

The settlements, within districts, were selected by simple random sampling for each of the two points. Within urban strata, we used neighborhoods (called “nahias” from cities and metros) and towns while in rural strata we used villages. As population data for settlement sizes does not exist, a simple random selection amongst all known settlements was used to select locations. The settlement/nahia served as the secondary sampling unit (SSU).

- a. Transportation constraints due to bad weather, and instability and frequent fighting in some provinces can cause a sampling point to be adjusted or replaced to keep interviewers out of areas that may be unsafe.
  - b. Replicate draws were provided to the field team prior to the launch of fieldwork. In the case when the replacements were exhausted, settlement/nahia level replacements were done in field by supervisors where neighboring accessible settlements were chosen as replacements whenever possible.
  - c. At the settlement level, 180 of the 1723 sampling points were randomly replaced within the same districts because of security reasons, 58 for transportation difficulties, 44 because they could not be located, 9 for weather related reasons and 19 for other accessibility issues. A complete list of replaced sampling points and reasons for replacements can be found in Appendix B.
4. Step 4: Field managers then used maps generated from several sources to select starting points within each SSU.
    - a. In rural areas, we used a system that requires interviewers to start in one of five randomly selected locations (Northern, Southern, Eastern, or Western edges of the rural settlement and Center).
    - b. In urban areas, because it is more difficult to differentiate neighborhood borders, a random location (Northern, Southern, Eastern, Western or Center) was provided to the interviewer, and they started from an identifiable landmark in the vicinity (ex: school, Mosque, etc.)
  5. Step 5 - A random walk method with a fixed sampling interval was performed from the starting point. For example, selecting every third house on the right in rural areas and every fifth house on the right in urban areas.

6. Step 6: After selecting a household, interviewers were instructed to utilize a Kish grid for randomizing the target respondent<sup>4</sup> within the household. Members of the household were listed with their names and their age in descending order and then the respondent was selected according to the rules of the Kish grid.

<sup>4</sup> Interviewers are not allowed to substitute an alternate member of a household for the respondent selected by the Kish grid. If the respondent refused to participate or was not available after callbacks, then the interviewer must move on to the next household according to the random route.

Weighting

The dataset includes two weights.

1. “wgt 1” is a post-stratification adjustment performed to match the population’s geographic distribution of Afghanistan. The only target used for this post stratification was Province by Urban/Rural status.
2. “wgt 2” is the same as wgt 1 except intercept interviews are not included in the calculations. The use of this weight effectively removes intercepts from the sample allowing for analysis of all interviews collected using random probability sampling methods.

Margin of Sampling Error and Design Effect

Given that the methodology for this survey is assumed to be a full probability-based sample, weighted data can be used to estimate variance for each statistic. These, in turn, can be used to estimate a design effect for the survey and then to estimate the complex margin of sampling error. Design effect estimates provided in this section account for both the complex sample design as well as the weights.

- The design was stratified by urbanity and province and then clustered by district and settlement.
- The design effect is estimated for five variables Q1, Q2, Q3, Q4 and Q5. In the following tables, we provide design effect estimates for each response category of the key variable through the survey package in R.
- In an effort to provide a survey-wide design effect, a “weighted mean” design effect is calculated as average across each response category of the variable when weighted by frequency of response which is then in turn averaged across all five variables.

TABLE 3: DESIGN EFFECT ESTIMATION USING Q1, Q2, Q3, Q4, Q5

A survey wide design effect and margin of error is calculated as the average design effect across these five variables. The survey wide design effect is 1.95.

Assuming simple random sample with  $n=13,422$   $p=.5$ , at the 95% CI level, a conservative estimate of the margin of error for the survey is 0.85%.

Accounting for the complex design through the design effect estimate of 1.95,  $p=.5$  at the 95% CI level, the complex margin of error (CMOE) is 1.18%.

Design effect estimates were also calculated at the provincial level. Detailed calculations can be located in the document titled ANQAR W40 CMOE Provincial v1 and a summary of the provincial level design effects and complex margin of error can be found in the document titled ANQAR W39 DEFF Summary v1.

III. FIELD IMPLEMENTATION

The following section reviews the contact procedures, the sample disposition and field outcomes.

Contact Procedures

After selecting a household, interviewers were instructed to utilize a Kish grid for randomizing the target respondent within the household. Members of the household were listed with their names and age in descending order. The Kish grid provides a random selection criteria based on which visit the household represents in his or her random walk and the number of inhabitants living in the household.

Under no circumstances were interviewers allowed to substitute an alternate member of a household for the selected respondent. If the respondent refused to participate or was not available after three call-backs, the interviewer then moved on to the next household according to the random walk.

Typically interviewers were required to make two call-backs before replacing the household. These call-backs are made at different times of the same day or on different days of the field period, in order to provide a broader schedule in which to engage the respondent. Due to security-related concerns, the field force has had difficulty meeting the requirement of two call-backs prior to substitution in many rural areas.

In this survey, while interviewers were able to complete some call-backs, the majority of the interviews were completed on the first attempt:

- First contact: 98.9%
- Second contact: 0.8%
- Third contact: .3%

Sample Disposition

This section describes the sample disposition which is another diagnostic tool to understand the validity of the sample. Final disposition codes, call outcome rates, and response rates contribute to an understanding of the presence of potential survey error.

This section contains:

- A detailed and comprehensive set of survey dispositions recoded into the six major types of American Association of Public Opinion Research (AAPOR) survey case dispositions.
- The formulas for calculating response rates, cooperation rates, and contact rates.
- A report of the final outcome rates for the evaluation of this survey according to the AAPOR Standards for Minimal Disclosure requirements (Part III of the Code of Professional Ethics and Practices).

Rate Calculations

The American Association of Public Opinion Researchers (AAPOR) publishes four different types of rate calculations used in AAPOR reporting (response rates, contact rates, cooperation rates, and refusal rates). D3 and ACSOR use AAPOR's Response Rate 3, Cooperation Rate 1, Refusal Rate 2, and Contact Rate 2 as their standards. Intercept interviews are treated the same as standard interviews for the purposes of calculating response rates.

Acronyms used in the formulas are below:

I	=	Complete Interview
P	=	Partial Interview
R	=	Refusal and break-off
NC	=	Non-contact
O	=	Other
UH	=	Unknown if household/occupied household unit
UO	=	Unknown, other
e	=	Estimated proportion of cases of unknown eligibility that are eligible

Response Rate 3= _____ I _____

$$(I + P) + (R + NC + O) + e (UH + UO)$$

Cooperation Rate 1= _____ I _____

$$(I + P) + R$$

Refusal Rate 2= _____ R _____

$$(I + P) + (R + NC + O) + e (UH + UO)$$

Contact Rate 2= _____ (I + P) + R + O _____

$$(I + P) + R + O + NC + e (UH + UO)$$

Final Disposition Codes

The survey cases are divided into six main types of AAPOR disposition groups: completed interviews, partial interviews, cases of unknown eligibility, non-contacts, refusals, and cases of ineligible interviews. Table 4 provides the final disposition classifications.

The response rate is the number of complete interviews divided by the number of interviews plus the number of non-interviews plus all cases of unknown eligibility. The cooperation rate is the proportion of all cases interviewed of all eligible participants ever contacted. The refusal rate is the proportion of all cases in which a participant refuses to do an interview, or breaks-off an interview of all potentially eligible cases. The contact rate measures the proportion of all cases in which the participant responsible and associated with the provided phone number was reached by the survey. Table 5 provides the following outcome rates for the survey: the response rate, cooperation rate, refusal rate, and contact rate.<sup>6</sup>

Field Outcomes

It is protocol for supervisors to note political, social, or other newsworthy events that occurred during the field period that may have affected the survey. The reports from field are listed below by date and location of the event.

Field Report

Field Report

May 15, 2018

Uruzgan: Four security personnel and 14 Taliban insurgents have been killed as a result of clashes in central Uruzgan province, an official said on Tuesday.

Aminullah Khaliqi, Chora district administrative chief, told Pajhwok Afghan News the militants stormed several security check-posts in the district late on Monday night.

He said four security men and 14 fighters were killed while six policemen and 11 rebels were wounded in firefights.

According to Khaliqi, civilians suffered no casualties during the overnight clashes. The Taliban have not yet commented on the situation.

FARAH :(Pajhwok): Taliban insurgents have attacked the capital of western Farah province, overrunning the 3rd police district. Clashes are still ongoing.

Eyewitnesses told Pajhwok Afghan News the militants staged attacks on the provincial capital from four directions. Heavy and light weapons fire could be heard in the city.

A resident, who wished to go unnamed, said the rebels had captured the 3rd police district and stormed the intelligence department. Helicopters are targeting the assailants.

Mohammad Ismail, another resident, said the Taliban had launched search operations in their area. No one is allowed to come out of home.

May 29, 2018*Nangarhar :

Nine people, including an Afghan Local Police (ALP) commander, have been killed and five others wounded in a security forces operation in eastern Nangarhar province, local sources said on Tuesday.

Afghan Special Forces' 02 Unit conducted operation in the Sarchina village of Chaparhar district late on Monday night.

Attaullah Khogyani, the governor's spokesman, confirmed the incident and casualties. Without going into details, he said information would be shared with the media later on.

Public Health Director Dr. Najibullah Kamawal told Pajhwok Afghan News nine bodies and five injured individuals had been brought to hospital from the site of the mistaken raid.

He said one woman and a child were among the injured but their condition was stable.

Mohammad Amin, an ALP officer, said an explosion took place before light weapons fire boomed. "We tried to escape, believing we were under attack from Daesh. But we were targeted by the Afghan forces."

Ziaur Rahman Zia, spokesman for Meshrano Jirga, alleged the security forces had targeted relatives of Senate Chairman Fazal Hadi Muslimyar.

He said: "ALP commander, a member of Muslimyar's family, his uncle, two cousins and other relatives were among the dead."

Ghulam Haidar Faqiri, director of refugees and cousin of Muslimyar, confirmed the victims were civilians and his family members.

Meanwhile, Khogyani said a high level delegation from Kabul had arrived in Jalalabad to investigate the airstrike.

On the other hand, Shams Rahman Muslimyar, a provincial council member and brother of Meshrano Jirga chairman, requested 'in-depth probe' into the incident.

On his Facebook page, Muslimyar said last night's operation in Chinaro village of Chaparhar killed family members of the Meshrano Jirga Chairman and close relatives. He also named those killed in the airstrike and said the victims were cousins and grandchildren of the Senate chairman.

"The Meshrano Jirga Chairman was in Saudi Arabia when the incident happened, his family and relatives have asked the central government to thoroughly investigate the attack," he said.

He warned local and central administrations would be held responsible of future consequences if the incident was poorly investigated. The injured and family members of the victims said they wanted to be given the reason why their nine relatives were killed.

Shah Tamas, who lost his son, Zurawar Khan (ALP commander) and three grandchildren, demanded the main perpetrators of the attack should be identified and punished. He said both who conducted the airstrike and those killed were all Afghan security forces, something he deemed questionable.

In the same district, and some other areas of Nangarhar, Afghan Special Forces, backed by foreign forces, had targeted civilians in the past.

IV. QUALITY CONTROL

This survey had a high level of quality control and oversight which contributes to the overall validity of the data collected.

Field Team

A description of the field team composition such as the number of interviewers by gender, the number of interviewers that have worked on previous D3 projects, and those that are new interviewers to a D3 project are described in Table 6.

TABLE 6: DESCRIPTION OF FIELD

	Female	Male	Total
Number of female/male interviewers	399	662	1061

Number of interviewers new to a D3 project	380	641	1021

Training

The central training for provincial supervisors was held in Kabul on May 14, 2018 and was led by ACSOR project managers Nazir Ekhlass and Jawed Alkozai. Thirty-four provincial supervisors were trained at the central training in Kabul. Additional provincial level trainings were conducted in all 34 provinces by the trained supervisors.

Topics covered during the training include:

- Proper household and respondent selection
- Review of the questionnaire content
- Proper recording of questions
- Appropriate interviewing techniques
- Proper usage of the contact sheets

The training sessions were conducted successfully, and no issues were reported.

Quality Control Methods – Field Level

When the questionnaires have returned to the ACSOR central office in Kabul they are sorted, and open-end questions are coded by a team of coders familiar with international standards for creating typologies for codes.

The questionnaires are then sent for data entry. ACSOR key-punches all questionnaires on-site to protect the data and closely control the quality of the data entry process. During this process, the keypunching team utilizes logic checks and verifies any errors inadvertently committed by interviewers.

Following the data cleaning process and logic checks of the dataset, ACSOR uses a proprietary program called Hunter that searches for additional patterns and duplicates that may indicate that an interview was not properly conducted by an interviewer.

The Hunter program includes three tests:

1. Equality test – compares interviews for similarities, grouped by interviewer, within sampling point, province, or any other variable. Typically, interviews with an interviewer average of 90% or higher are flagged for further investigation.
2. Non response test – determines the percentage of “Don’t Knows” for each interviewer’s cases. Typically, interviews with 25% or higher Don’t Know responses are flagged for further investigation.

3. Duplicates test – compares cases across all interviewers and respondents to check for similarity rates. This test will flag any pair of interviews that are similar to each other. Typically, any cases that have a similarity of 95% or higher are flagged for further investigation.

Any interview that does not pass Hunter is pulled out for additional screening. If the interview does not pass screening, it is removed from the final database before delivery.

For Wave 40, the Hunter program flagged a total of 973 cases to be removed:

- 56 cases were removed due to over 90% similarity in answers
- 3 cases were removed due to having over 40% non-response
- 288 cases were removed for being over 95% similar in substantive responses (duplicates test).

Quality Control – Double Entry

For the Wave 40 survey, ACSOR randomly selected 2072 out of questionnaires of the total 13784<sup>8</sup> (15%). These questionnaires were then given to an independent team for entry. Data results from this independent entry were then compared to the primary data set. Discrepancies and errors were identified by data coders. All discrepancies were compared to the fielded questionnaires. The data in the finalized dataset were based on the responses provided in the original questionnaires. The results of double entry showed an overall error rate of .09%, which is comparably low and acceptable for quality control standards.

<sup>8</sup> Total n size before Hunter deletions and cases were removed due to improper survey administration and misprinted questionnaires.

V. QUESTIONNAIRE

The questionnaire was drafted from client specifications consisting of 31 management questions, 18 demographics questions, and 104 substantive questions. The mean interview length was 33 minutes with a range of 20 to 62 minutes. Topic areas that were addressed in the questionnaire include:

- Security
- Afghan National Security Forces
- NATO/International Forces
- Reconciliation/Reintegration
- Taliban/Da'esh
- Government performance
- Economic conditions
- Dispute resolution
- Perception of countries and organizations
