I. INTRODUCTION

The Afghanistan Nationwide Quarterly Research (ANQAR) survey was designed to gain a broader understanding of the attitudes, behaviors, and issues that are important to the people of Afghanistan. This report reviews the methodology of the Wave 39 survey conducted in the winter of 2018.

Fieldwork for Wave 39 was conducted by ACSOR for RS/NATO in Afghanistan from February 25 – March 10, 2018. The sample includes a national probability sample of 10,625 Afghans selected at random in all 34 of the country's provinces; and a sample conducted via intercept interviews of 2,184. Respondents were 18 years and older, 64% were male and 36% were female. The survey includes both urban (25%) and rural (75%) households. Unless otherwise noted, all figures in this report represent unweighted results.

Executive Summary

The sampling methodology, questionnaire design, field team, and overall field experience are summarized in this report.

- Fieldwork was conducted from February 25 – March 10, 2018. The field team consisted of 1056 trained interviews and supervisors under the management of D3 Systems and ACSOR.
- ANQAR Wave 39 includes a total sample of 12,809 men and women 18 years of age and older in all 34 provinces of Afghanistan. 10,625 interviews were conducted via random walk with male and female respondents and 2,184 interviews were conducted via intercept interviews with males in areas where security or weather restricted random selection interviewing. A full list of the locations for the intercept interviews can be found in Appendix A.
- The sample was stratified by province and urban/rural status using population data released by the Central Statistics Office (2017 - 2018 estimates) of Afghanistan. Additional booster sampling points were distributed to smaller provinces to ensure that the minimum sample size per province was at least 110 interviews. Booster sampling points were distributed in Panjshayr, Nuristan and Nimroz.
- Replacement draws within the same district originally selected were provided to the field team prior to the launch of fieldwork. In the case when the replacements were exhausted, settlement/nahia level replacements were done in field by supervisors where neighboring accessible settlements were chosen as replacements whenever possible. A full list of the Wave 38 replacements can be found in Appendix B.
- The sample was 64% male and 36% female. The survey was designed to include 50% male and 50% female respondents, but due to violence, transportation conditions, and local norms female interviewers could not travel to some selected districts. Sampling points that were planned for interviews with women and could not be covered by female interviewers were replaced with male interviews in the same village.

- The questionnaire consisted of 31 management questions, 18 demographics questions, and 109 substantive questions. Topics included quality of life, security, perceptions of the government, reconciliation, and migration.
- The mean interview length was 33 minutes with a range of 20 to 59 minutes.
- Various quality control procedures were employed throughout the project. During field, interviewers were observed by supervisors. Field supervisors also conducted back-checks of interviews. During the data processing phase, a proprietary program, Hunter, was used to search for patterns or anomalies in the data that may indicate an interview was not properly conducted by an interviewer. For the Wave 39 survey, a total of 973 cases were removed from the dataset; 866 cases were removed for being over 95% similar in substantive responses, 96 cases were removed due to similarities in answers, and 11 cases was removed for having over 40% don't know or refusal responses.
- The data were also screened for keypunching errors. ACSOR randomly selected 10% of the survey's questionnaires for double entry. The double punched questionnaires were compared to the originally punched questionnaires. Discrepancies between the two were rectified and the final data files were based strictly on a review of the original questionnaires. The overall error rate for the Wave 39 survey was .09%. The error rate was very low overall, and we have confidence in the fidelity of the keypunched data.
- The Wave 39 survey has a margin of sampling error of ± 0.87 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence level. The overall design effect is 1.99. The complex margin of error is $\pm 1.22\%$.
- For the overall sample, the response rate is 82.21%, the cooperation rate is 93.90%, the refusal rate is 3.66%, and the contact rate is 87.55%.

II. SAMPLE DESIGN

The sample was drawn using a stratified multi-stage cluster design. D3 used the 2017-2018¹ updated figures provided by the Central Statistics Office (CSO) of the Afghan government. D3 chooses to use this because, similar to the 2010- 2011 update, much of the 2017-2018 update is based on data drawn from the Ministry of Rural Reconstruction and Development relying on results from the National Reconstruction Vulnerability Assessment (NRVA) based on a detailed cataloging of households to help inform the updates in a systematic, replicable way. While the proportions by provinces have changed in mostly a uniform, formulaic manner, the additional use of NRVA data adds to the detail of the estimates.

Sampling Methodology

The target population for this survey was a nation-wide poll of Afghans age 18+.

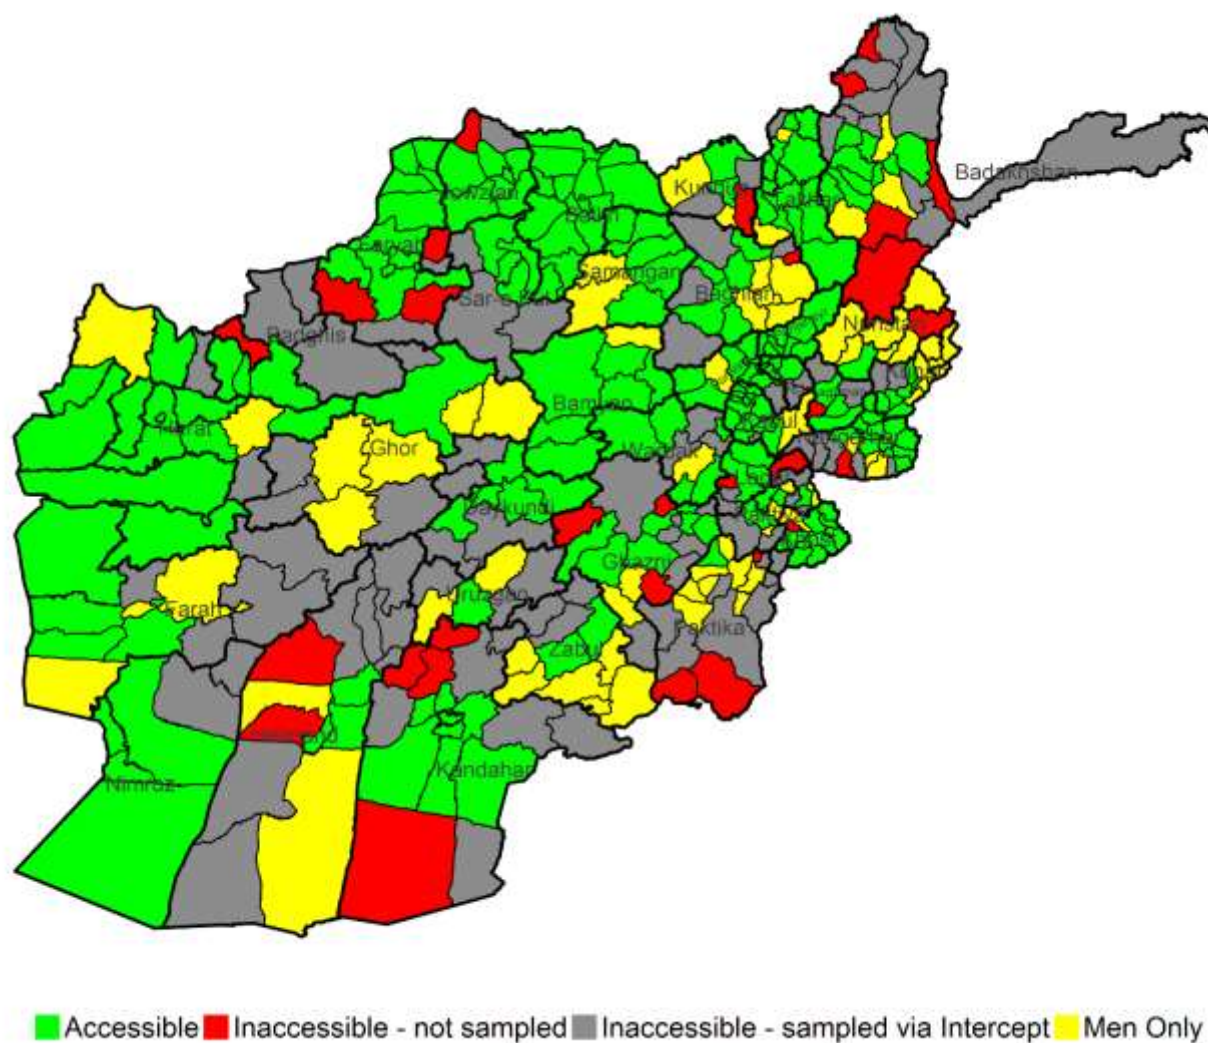

1. Step 1: Primary sampling units (PSU) were allocated across all of Afghanistan's 34 provinces using proportional stratification. Urban/rural status and province serve as the strata. In field, villages were considered rural while towns, cities and metros were considered urban. Settlements or neighborhoods within randomly selected districts were chosen by simple random sampling.
 - a. Booster interviews (n=88) were added to small provinces to ensure that the minimum sample size per province was at least 110 interviews. Booster interviews were added in Panjshayr (n= 32), Nuristan (n=32) and Nimroz (n=24).
2. Step 2: Districts were selected via probability proportional to size (PPS) systematic sampling. Districts serve as the primary sampling unit (PSU).

¹ There is no official census of Afghanistan. The Central Statistics Office (CSO) of the Afghan government has attempted to provide updates since 2003, but their base is influenced by figures from the 1979 census. The CSO has received support from the UN, the Ministry of Rural Reconstruction and Development, and the World Food Programme to issue updates. D3 completed its review of 2017-2018 updates from the CSO and feels they are acceptable as replacements for the 2006 estimates.

In situations where the selected district was inaccessible due to security, transportation, weather, or other reasons, another district within the province was randomly selected:

- a. In situations where the selected district was inaccessible due to security, transportation or weather, intercept interviews were conducted with residents of those districts who were traveling in neighboring districts. Intercept interviews were used in 284 sampling points. These were conducted with male respondents only². A list of the intercept interviews can be found in Appendix A.

Of the 424³ potential primary sampling units in the country, 20% were inaccessible to male interviewers, 31% were inaccessible for female interviewers. Overall, 135 completely inaccessible districts were sampled. These were made accessible to male interviewers by intercept interviews.

³ There are 408 districts in Afghanistan; however Kabul City is composed of 16 nahias leading to 424 primary sampling units used in the survey's sampling frame.

Including design effects, results have a complex margin of sampling error of +/- 1.22 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence level for the full sample.

3. Step 3: Selected PSU that were completely accessible were divided into two sampling points of 8: one female and one male. This was done to allow for gender matched interviewing due to cultural constraints and to also obtain a greater geographical coverage within district, and therefore overall.

The settlements, within districts, were selected by simple random sampling for each of the two points. Within urban strata, we used neighborhoods (called “nahias” from cities and metros) and towns while in rural strata we used villages. As population data for settlement sizes does not exist, a simple random selection amongst all known settlements was used to select locations. The settlement/nahia served as the secondary sampling unit (SSU).

- a. Transportation constraints due to bad weather, and instability and frequent fighting in some provinces can cause a sampling point to be adjusted or replaced to keep interviewers out of areas that may be unsafe.
 - b. Replicate draws were provided to the field team prior to the launch of fieldwork. In the case when the replacements were exhausted, settlement/nahia level replacements were done in field by supervisors where neighboring accessible settlements were chosen as replacements whenever possible.
 - c. At the settlement level, 306 of the 1723 sampling points were randomly replaced within the same districts because of security reasons, 149 for transportation difficulties, 74 because they could not be located, 13 for weather related reasons and 26 for other accessibility issues. A complete list of replaced sampling points and reasons for replacements can be found in Appendix B.
4. Step 4: Field managers then used maps generated from several sources to select starting points within each SSU.
 - a. In rural areas, we used a system that requires interviewers to start in one of five randomly selected locations (Northern, Southern, Eastern, or Western edges of the rural settlement and Center).

- b. In urban areas, because it is more difficult to differentiate neighborhood borders, a random location (Northern, Southern, Eastern, Western or Center) was provided to the interviewer, and they started from an identifiable landmark in the vicinity (ex: school, Mosque, etc.)
5. Step 5 - A random walk method with a fixed sampling interval was performed from the starting point. For example, selecting every third house on the right in rural areas and every fifth house on the right in urban areas.
6. Step 6: After selecting a household, interviewers were instructed to utilize a Kish grid for randomizing the target respondent⁴ within the household. Members of the household were listed with their names and their age in descending order and then the respondent was selected according to the rules of the Kish grid.

Weighting

The dataset includes two weights.

1. "wgt 1" is a post-stratification adjustment performed to match the population's geographic distribution of Afghanistan. The only target used for this post stratification was Province by Urban/Rural status.
2. "wgt 2" is the same as wgt 1 except intercept interviews are not included in the calculations. The use of this weight effectively removes intercepts from the sample allowing for analysis of all interviews collected using random probability sampling methods.

Margin of Sampling Error and Design Effect

Given that the methodology for this survey is assumed to be a full probability-based sample, weighted data can be used to estimate variance for each statistic. These, in turn, can be used to estimate a design effect for the survey and then to estimate the complex margin of sampling error. Design effect estimates provided in this section account for both the complex sample design as well as the weights.

- The design was stratified by urbanity and province and then clustered by district and settlement.
- The design effect is estimated for five variables Q1, Q2, Q3, Q4 and Q5. In the following tables, we provide design effect estimates for each response category of the key variable through the survey package in R.
- In an effort to provide a survey-wide design effect, a "weighted mean" design effect is calculated as average across each response category of the variable when weighted by frequency of response which is then in turn averaged across all five variables.

A survey wide design effect and margin of error is calculated as the average design effect across these five variables. The survey wide design effect is 1.99.

Assuming simple random sample with $n=12,809$, $p=.5$, at the 95% CI level, a conservative estimate of the margin of error for the survey is 0.87%.

Accounting for the complex design through the design effect estimate of 1.99, $p=.5$ at the 95% CI level, the complex margin of error (CMOE) is 1.22%.

Design effect estimates were also calculated at the provincial level. Detailed calculations can be located in the document titled ANQAR W39 CMOE Provincial v1 and a summary of the provincial level design effects and complex margin of error can be found in the document titled ANQAR W39 DEFF Summary v1.

III. FIELD IMPLEMENTATION

The following section reviews the contact procedures, the sample disposition and field outcomes.

Contact Procedures

After selecting a household, interviewers were instructed to utilize a Kish grid for randomizing the target respondent within the household. Members of the household were listed with their names and age in descending order. The Kish grid provides a random selection criteria based on which visit the household represents in his or her random walk and the number of inhabitants living in the household.

Under no circumstances were interviewers allowed to substitute an alternate member of a household for the selected respondent. If the respondent refused to participate or was not available after three call-backs, the interviewer then moved on to the next household according to the random walk.

Typically interviewers were required to make two call-backs before replacing the household. These call-backs are made at different times of the same day or on different days of the field period, in order to provide a broader schedule in which to engage the respondent. Due to security-related concerns, the field force has had difficulty meeting the requirement of two call-backs prior to substitution in many rural areas.

In this survey, while interviewers were able to complete some call-backs, the majority of the interviews were completed on the first attempt:

- First contact: 99.3%
- Second contact: 0.5%
- Third contact: .2%

Sample Disposition

This section describes the sample disposition which is another diagnostic tool to understand the validity of the sample. Final disposition codes, call outcome rates, and response rates contribute to an understanding of the presence of potential survey error.

This section contains:

- A detailed and comprehensive set of survey dispositions recoded into the six major types of American Association of Public Opinion Research (AAPOR) survey case dispositions.
- The formulas for calculating response rates, cooperation rates, and contact rates.
- A report of the final outcome rates for the evaluation of this survey according to the AAPOR Standards for Minimal Disclosure requirements (Part III of the Code of Professional Ethics and Practices).

Rate Calculations

The American Association of Public Opinion Researchers (AAPOR) publishes four different types of rate calculations used in AAPOR reporting (response rates, contact rates, cooperation rates, and refusal rates). D3 and ACSOR use AAPOR's Response Rate 3, Cooperation Rate 1, Refusal Rate 2, and Contact Rate 2 as their standards. Intercept interviews are treated the same as standard interviews for the purposes of calculating response rates.

Acronyms used in the formulas are below:

I	=	Complete Interview
P	=	Partial Interview
R	=	Refusal and break-off
NC	=	Non-contact
O	=	Other
UH	=	Unknown if household/occupied household unit
UO	=	Unknown, other
e	=	Estimated proportion of cases of unknown eligibility that are eligible

Response Rate 3= _____ I _____

$$(I + P) + (R + NC + O) + e (UH + UO)$$

Cooperation Rate 1= _____ I _____

$$(I + P) + R$$

Refusal Rate 2= _____ R _____

$$(I + P) + (R + NC + O) + e (UH + UO)$$

Contact Rate 2= _____ (I + P) + R + O _____

$$(I + P) + R + O + NC + e (UH + UO)$$

Final Disposition Codes

The survey cases are divided into six main types of AAPOR disposition groups: completed interviews, partial interviews, cases of unknown eligibility, non-contacts, refusals, and cases of ineligible interviews. Table 4 provides the final disposition classifications.

The response rate is the number of complete interviews divided by the number of interviews plus the number of non-interviews plus all cases of unknown eligibility. The cooperation rate is the proportion of all cases interviewed of all eligible participants ever contacted. The refusal rate is the proportion of all cases in which a participant refuses to do an interview, or breaks-off an interview of all potentially eligible cases. The contact rate measures the proportion of all cases in which the participant responsible and associated with the provided phone number was reached by the survey. Table 5 provides the following outcome rates for the survey: the response rate, cooperation rate, refusal rate, and contact rate.⁶

Field Outcomes

It is protocol for supervisors to note political, social, or other newsworthy events that occurred during the field period that may have affected the survey. The reports from field are listed below by date and location of the event.

Field Report

Feb 25, 2018

SHARAN (Pajhwok): Three people, including a policeman, were killed and 12 others wounded in a motorbike bomb blast in southeastern Paktika province on Sunday, an official said.

Mohammad Reza Pacha, the district police chief for Yahyakhel district, told Pajhwok Afghan News the explosion took place in the district bazaar at around 10:00am.

He added a policeman was among three people killed and six other wounded but civilian hospital officials confirmed receiving 12 injured individuals from the scene of the bombing.

Mohammadullah, a shopkeeper, said the explosive device had been attached to a motorbike. Some shops and three vehicles were also damaged in the motorbike-bomb explosion.

No one has so far claimed responsibility for the attack.

KABUL (Pajhwok): Unidentified gunmen have shot dead a former senator and commander of the Jamiat-i-Islami Afghanistan (JIA) party in the capital Kabul, an official said on Sunday.

Police spokesman Basir Ahmad Mujahid told Pajhwok Afghan News the shooting took place in Bostan area in the limits of the 12th police district at around 6:30pm on Saturday.

He said the gunmen traveling in a Corolla vehicle shot dead Rafiullah Gul Afghan along with his driver. The assailants fled the area, taking advantage of darkness.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, which was denounced by JIA's deputy head Atta Mohammad Noor. He extended his sympathies and condolences to the victim's family.

Rafiulla Afghan, son of Abdul Aziz Akhunzada, was born in 1352 solar year in the Qarabagh district of Kabul. He received higher education at the Tabesh University.

PUL-I-KHUMRI (Pajhwok): At least nine Taliban insurgents were killed and three other wounded during an ongoing clearing operation in northern Baghlan province on Sunday, an official said.

Lt. Mohammad Hanif Rezae, spokesman for the 209th Shaheen Military Corps, told Pajhwok Afghan News Afghan forces have conducted clearing operation in Tala aw Barfak district of province since Sunday morning.

He said the operation amid at clearing the highway leading to the coalmine from rebels and eradicating their hideouts and check-post in the area.

Security forces and civilians suffered no casualties so far in the clearing operation, he concluded.

Police spokesman Zabihullah Shuja, said the clearing operation would continue until the last rebel is eliminated from the area.

Mulana Khaliq Dad Barfaky, a resident of the Barfak district, said the clearing operation has been going so fast and security forces suffered no casualties.

Khwaja Ghar district chief Mohammad Omar said the clashes between security forces and the insurgents continued until 3am with the rebels briefly capturing Gor Tapa and Monin Pul areas.

Police spokesman Col. Aseer said the attackers had come from Dasht-i-Archi district of northern Kunduz province.

Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid said 12 posts were captured and 29 security forces were killed and eight others wounded in the last night attacks in Khwaja Ghar district.

KABUL (Pajhwok): At least eight people were killed and more than 20 others were wounded on Friday when a suicide bomber blew himself up near a gathering in memory of Abdul Ali Mazari in Kabul.

The blast occurred at about 11:20am in Qala Nazar area near participants of the 23rd death anniversary of Mazari. Second deputy chief executive officer Mohammad Mohaqqiq was addressing the event when the blast took place.

The event was disrupted for a few minutes before returning to normalcy. Interior Ministry second deputy spokesman Nasrat Rahimi told Pajhwok the bomber detonated explosives strapped to his body soon after he was recognized by security forces at the fourth security check point.

He said the blast took place about 300 meters from the gathering --- the target of the attacker – killing seven civilians and one policeman. Another seven people were wounded.

However, Kabul police chief Daud Amin put the toll at five dead and 22 others wounded in the blast.

He said all participants of the gathering remained unhurt and the anniversary was ended at 12:30pm.

No group has so far asserted responsibility for the bombing.

FARAH CITY (Pajhwok): Four commando forces have been killed during a clash with Taliban in the Balabulok district of western Farah province, the Ministry of Defence (MoD) said on Saturday.

Maj. Gen. Dawlat Wazeri, spokesman for the Defence Ministry, told Pajhwok Afghan News four commandos were killed by the Taliban insurgents in Balabulok district on Friday.

He did not provide further details into the incident but said the Taliban also suffered casualties in the overnight clash.

But Qari Yousuf Ahmadi, the Taliban spokesman, claimed inflicting casualties to 53 Commando forces and capturing their weapons and ammunition in the attack.

Meanwhile, Sayed Ahmad, a resident of the Dehzaq village of the district, said that Taliban killed eight Commando forces in Totang village late on Friday night.

HERAT CITY/FAIZABAD (Pajhwok): One person was killed and 32 other including children and women were wounded in two separate accidents in western Herat and northeastern Badakhshan provinces, officials said on Saturday.

Jilani Farhad, the Herat governor's spokesman, told Pajhwok Afghan News a mini-bus overturned in the Imam-Shash Noor locality of Herat City, the provincial capital, late on Friday night.

Mohammad Rafiq Sherzai, Herat Zonal Hospital's spokesman, said the incident occurred when the bus was on the way from Herat to Iran the border. He said 10 children and 17 women were among the 28 wounded.

Elsewhere, a Suzuki car veered off the road in Badakhshan province, Traffic Director Maj. Hafizi said. The ill-fated car was heading from Khash district to Faizabad.

He added a man was killed and four other were wounded, he said, adding the injured were in stable condition.

IV. QUALITY CONTROL

This section provides a description of quality control. Additional data processing checks and hard checks taken to ensure the quality of the report are summarized in this section. This survey had a high level of quality control and oversight which contributes to the overall validity of the data collected.

Field Team

A description of the field team composition such as the number of interviewers by gender, the number of interviewers that have worked on previous D3 projects, and those that are new interviewers to a D3 project are described in Table 6.

TABLE 6: DESCRIPTION OF FIELD

	Female	Male	Total
Number of female/male interviewers	407	649	1056
Number of interviewers previously used in D3 project	401	625	1026
Number of interviewers new to a D3 project	6	24	30

Training

The central training for provincial supervisors was held in Kabul on February 21, 2018 and was led by ACSOR project managers Nazir Ekhlass and Jawed Alkozai. Thirty-four provincial supervisors were trained at the central training in Kabul. Additional provincial level trainings were conducted in all 34 provinces by the trained supervisors.

Topics covered during the training include:

- Proper household and respondent selection
- Review of the questionnaire content
- Proper recording of questions
- Appropriate interviewing techniques
- Proper usage of the contact sheets

The training sessions were conducted successfully, and no issues were reported.

Quality Control Methods – Field Level

When the questionnaires have returned to the ACSOR central office in Kabul they are sorted, and open-end questions are coded by a team of coders familiar with international standards for creating typologies for codes.

The questionnaires are then sent for data entry. ACSOR key-punches all questionnaires on-site to protect the data and closely control the quality of the data entry process. During this process, the keypunching team utilizes logic checks and verifies any errors inadvertently committed by interviewers.

Following the data cleaning process and logic checks of the dataset, ACSOR uses a proprietary program called Hunter that searches for additional patterns and duplicates that may indicate that an interview was not properly conducted by an interviewer.

The Hunter program includes three tests:

1. Equality test – compares interviews for similarities, grouped by interviewer, within sampling point, province, or any other variable. Typically, interviews with an interviewer average of 90% or higher are flagged for further investigation.
2. Non response test – determines the percentage of “Don’t Knows” for each interviewer’s cases. Typically, interviews with 25% or higher Don’t Know responses are flagged for further investigation.

3. Duplicates test – compares cases across all interviewers and respondents to check for similarity rates. This test will flag any pair of interviews that are similar to each other. Typically, any cases that have a similarity of 95% or higher are flagged for further investigation.

Any interview that does not pass Hunter is pulled out for additional screening. If the interview does not pass screening, it is removed from the final database before delivery.

For Wave 38, the Hunter program flagged a total of 973 cases to be removed:

- 96 cases were removed due to over 90% similarity in answers
- 11 cases were removed due to having over 40% non-response
- 866 cases were removed for being over 95% similar in substantive responses (duplicates test).

Quality Control – Double Entry

For the Wave 39 survey, ACSOR randomly selected 2072 out of questionnaires of the total 13784⁸ (15%). These questionnaires were then given to an independent team for entry. Data results from this independent entry were then compared to the primary data set. Discrepancies and errors were identified by data coders. All discrepancies were compared to the fielded questionnaires. The data in the finalized dataset were based on the responses provided in the original questionnaires. The results of double entry showed an overall error rate of .09%, which is comparably low and acceptable for quality control standards.

⁸ Total n size before Hunter deletions and cases were removed due to improper survey administration and misprinted questionnaires.

V. QUESTIONNAIRE

The questionnaire was drafted from client specifications consisting of 31 management questions, 18 demographics questions, and 104 substantive questions. The mean interview length was 33 minutes with a range of 20 to 59 minutes. Topic areas that were addressed in the questionnaire include:

- Security
- Afghan National Security Forces
- NATO/International Forces
- Reconciliation/Reintegration
- Taliban/Da'esh
- Government performance
- Economic conditions
- Dispute resolution
- Perception of countries and organizations
- Migration

VI. OUTLOOK FOR FUTURE STUDIES

Due to a number of irregularities flagged during D3's quality control assessment, D3/ACSOR had to delete a high number of cases that resulted in the final dataset falling below the contracted sample size. As a result, ACSOR has given 9 interviewers red cards which means they will no longer be employed with ACSOR and gave supervisors and interviewing staff in 15 provinces a yellow card which means they were re-trained, docked pay and will be terminated if they receive a red or yellow card in the next wave.
